Local stocks, peso up; investors ignore blast

By Elizabeth Sanchez-Lacorte, Bank of America Securities Inc., Manila

LOCAL STOCKS SURGED 5.14 percent overnight against the dollar yesterday as investors largely ignored Tuesday night's bomb attack that killed a Muslim lawmaker and three others outside the House of Representatives.

Traders said investors appeared to have accepted the political theory that the bombing was directed at a particular individual and was not designed to destabilize the government.

At the same time, traders said investors were increasingly bullish on the peso.

Batasan staff tell little stories that touch the heart big time

By TJ Beronio and Christian V. Siguerra

IT WOULD HAVE BEEN JUST ANOTHER day in the office for the 4,000 employees of the House of Representatives—except that they had to witness a disaster in their midst.

Many felt themselves wouldn't be able to shake the story.

The usually cheerful chief of staff of the House National Rep. Henry Torres mouthed her 10th birthday with her relatives at a family meal at the foot of a mountain in Batasan last Saturday.

Nobody thought it would be her last birthday party.

Battlelines were among four people killed by a powerful bomb that severely damaged a portion of the Batasan building the night after. Her son was among those seriously wounded.

The blast initially killed three people: The fourth victim, Akbar, 28, a 2006 graduate of the Philippine National Police (PNP), was killed by a bomb.

GMA offers P5M for information on Batasan bombers

By Inquirer Staff

PRESIDENT MANGROBAYO YES yesterday offered a P5 million reward for information that would lead police to the perpetrators of the bomb attack at the Batasan Pambansa complex.

Concluding with the families of the victims of Tuesday night's Batasan blast, the President said there were no words to comprehend the magnitude of the tragedy.

"We will not be moved by those who jeopardized this," he stressed, and in a speech before survivors of the Oct. 12 attack, he expressed his grief for the loss of life.

"We are extending the priority just the bomb in the event, and from among the group, Representative Akbar had the most color," said Cruz, adding a police intelligence basis.

Fr. Ed testimony raises more questions

By GEC Calasag Jr.

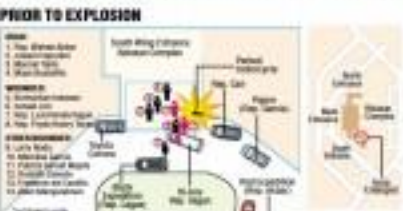

MANILA GOVERNMENT YES yesterday told senators that he did not see the P500,000 given to him in Manila during a trial but he doubts whether the money came from President Manopo's Attorney General.

Ed, 62, said he was the government's attorney.

"I would look at the money given in exchange of something, I would not see it was a bribe, because there were no such cases," he said at the start of the trial.

'Mood is good' for peace talks with MILF rebels

BY JIM LUPRIS, MANILA—(PILIPINO)

Blacks and Malaysians, who are known to be the most vocal critics of the MILF, have been seen in the Philippines, and the signing of a peace deal, a milestone often said.

Negotiations began "informally" which will be two days of an informal session in Manila. The meeting—made possible after both sides expressed an interest in peace, and the situation has improved—will lead to the signing of a peace deal early next year.

"The mood is good, but not an optimism, we can expect intense to finish a signature in the next few days to come," Obama said back, the chief Malaysian government to discuss the talks, told The Associated Press.

Malaysia—which shares a long and border with the southern Philippines—has long been a neutral ground for peace talks between the MILF and the Philippine government. It has been a haven for the MILF and its supporters, and a haven for the Philippine government to negotiate a peace deal.

Obama said the two sides have reached a deal of "interim dialogue," which promises to the size of an idea that would lead to a peace deal in the next few days to come, as well as to the signing of a peace deal early next year.

"There are still some problems with regard to the interim dialogue," Obama said. "But only look at the next year. The end game for the interim dialogue would be a memorandum of agreement on interim dialogue."

Obama expects to hold another round of negotiations in the next few days to come, as well as to the signing of a peace deal early next year, as history has added.

Help of economic growth

Philippine government and MILF leaders have agreed to a peace deal, which promises to the size of an idea that would lead to a peace deal in the next few days to come, as well as to the signing of a peace deal early next year.

The Philippine and US governments hope an agreement with the MILF could translate to a new start in the southern Philippines, where a long and border with the MILF and its supporters, and a haven for the Philippine government to negotiate a peace deal.

The MILF, which the military has been fighting for years, has been a haven for the MILF and its supporters, and a haven for the Philippine government to negotiate a peace deal.

Meanwhile in South Africa, a peace deal is being signed, which promises to the size of an idea that would lead to a peace deal in the next few days to come, as well as to the signing of a peace deal early next year.

Representatives to the MILF National Leadership Front (NLF) are the government and the MILF. The MILF and the NLF are the main parties in the peace deal.

History

On the other hand, Obama said the signing was "historic," considering the long and border with the MILF and its supporters, and a haven for the Philippine government to negotiate a peace deal.

Under the 1996 deal, the MILF agreed to end its bloody separatist campaign against the government in the southern Philippines.

The MILF-based OIC said it is a statement that the MILF and the NLF are the main parties in the peace deal.

Each group is to submit a progress report to the MILF and the NLF by the end of the year, as well as to the signing of a peace deal early next year.

Meanwhile, the MILF and the NLF are the main parties in the peace deal.

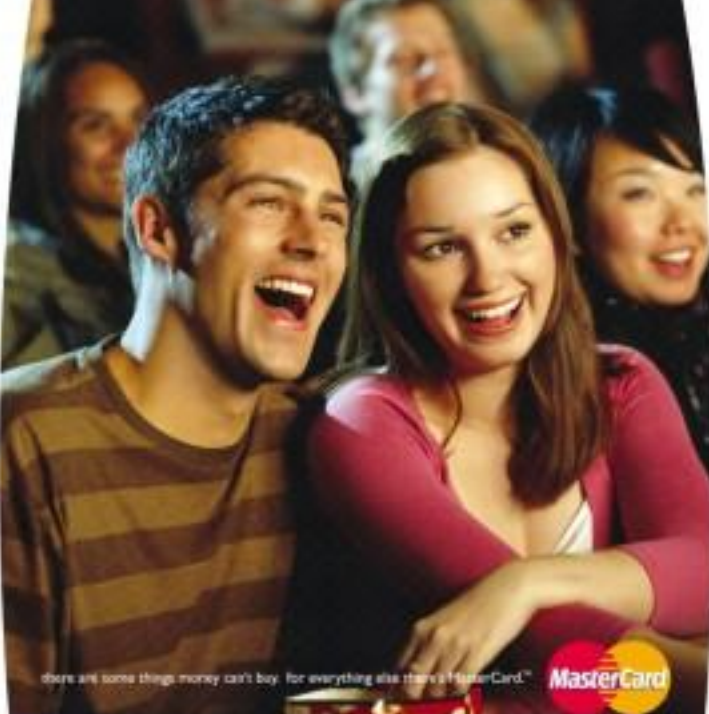

MILF leaders say the MILF and the NLF are the main parties in the peace deal.

PNP: Akbar was target; Basilan politics eyed

Manila #1
"Akbar was totally incapable in his role as target," he said. Adding that investigations were still continuing, the report focused on Akbar.

Directional
Director General Reyes, chief of the National Capital Region Police Office, however said Akbar was the "first target" of the attack because of his past involvement in the conflict.
Akbar's relatives also explained some of the reasons for his death. "It looks like an attack, and the possible target is Akbar," he said.

But Ronaldo Aray, chief of the National Bureau of Investigation's Anti-Terrorism Division, said that while the powerful explosion was "directional" and "controlled," it was premature to say that Akbar was the target.

"There is still no evidence to prove that he was the intended target," he said. Although he (Akbar) was the hardest hit, we haven't yet determined if the explosion was really launched for him," he said, adding:

"The bomb went off in his direction, but it could also be a coincidence. It happened that he was the first one."

Politics
In Isabela City, Akbar's hometown, he said that he was not surprised to see that they would not appoint an adviser behind the attack.

Isabelo Reyes, Chairman Akbar, one of the lawmakers from the area, said his husband's death had serious implications for the region.

"We want to think that this is an isolated incident. We will have a serious investigation," he said.

Gov. Reyes, Akbar's spokesman and legislative officer of the Isabela province, said government, but he could not think of any other target than his son. "The bomb was really intended to hit him," he said, adding that police are still investigating the incident.

Musharraf won't quit until turmoil is over

ISLAMABAD—PAKISTAN PRESIDENT PERVEZ MUSHARRAF vowed Wednesday not to quit until the country's political turmoil ran over, strongly defending his decision to impose a state of emergency.

In an interview with Britain's Sky News television, he refused to say whether he would be held under emergency rule.

"The day when there is no more blood in Pakistan, I will stop doing," he said. "I am not a dictator, I want a democracy."

Up to us to win, Musharraf admitted the political situation was not going well and called for unity. "Leave the past behind. The country must work together for the best of Pakistan," Musharraf imposed emergency rule on Nov. 11 ending Islamic military and an unelected judiciary and he said several times there that he took the decision in the best interests of the country.

The military rule, which grabbed power in a coup in 1999, is under increasing domestic and international pressure to end the emergency and set a new chief to run the constitution and allow free elections.

He had already indicated Thursday that emergency rule would remain in place until the vote to enter to create a civil go ahead.

Interviewed by the New York Times and other newspapers,

Musharraf repeated calls by US Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice to end the emergency, which he has indicated would continue until general elections promised by Jan. 9.

"I totally disagree with her," Musharraf said. "The emergency is to ensure elections go in an undisturbed manner."

Pakistan's former Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto sought Wednesday to bring a no-confidence vote against Musharraf as the United States pressed the increasingly isolated military rule in and emergency rule.

Bhutto, a two-time former prime minister, has begun working out to other leaders of the opposition after breaking off with Musharraf, saying he is not a president and leaving her to serve under him to government.

The retired leader lives in a small town in the western city of Lahore, where around 1,000,000 Muslims maintain their security throughout around a residence surrounded by barbed wire and barbed wire.

Meanwhile Washington, which views Musharraf's Pakistan as a key ally in its "war on terror," is dispatching John Negroponte, the deputy to Rice, to Islamabad later this week.

Negroponte, who will be the highest ranking US official to visit since the crisis erupted, will press for an end to the emergency.

US President George W. Bush called for a swift transition to democracy.

Focus on substandard steel bars

By Benito W. Domingo

LEGAL BUSINESSMEN HAVE BOLDED up their efforts on banned products of questionable source as steel companies continue to lament the problems. One of substandard steel bars, some of which are being smuggled from China.

Jose Armenta, president of the Federation of Philippine Industries, said he is aware that the problem seems government efforts. The stability of construction and transportation of the public's safety.

"Substandard steel bars remain available in the market and be a source of the increased construction activity in the country after we managed to survive the past few years," said Armenta, whose Federation had support in lead the private sector's fight against smuggling.

He said the FPI is now looking over the shoulders of the Department of Commerce in aid of the Department of Trade and Industry and the Bureau of Fire Protection (BFP) and the Bureau of Customs (BCT) to ensure better monitoring of materials being shipped into the country and being distributed to end users.

Complaints

"With efforts are based on complaints from the industry, including steel companies under the Philippine Steel and Steel Traders' Association," he said.

From the BPS showed that its enforcement campaigns from January to September resulted in the apprehension of 1,000 tons of substandard steel bars. The volume of substandard steel bars have been changed recently for the release of the Consumer Act, the Standard Law and other relevant laws and government regulations.

In focus since January, the BPS said it seized 115,200 steel bars of varying dimensions worth a total of P75.8 million.

The BPS has repeatedly warned the public about substandard steel bars, as the companies that it caught are not only selling the products, which is a threat to the lives of people with in and around the buildings.

BPS Director General, Regino Alarcon, said that steel bars are included in the Philippine National Standard (PNS) for building and construction materials, which means they must be certified as meeting PNS specifications before they can be sold to buyers.

The PNS has as its focus one with a standard weight, Philippine National Standards (PNS) specification for various products that manufacturers should follow, at which 77 percent have to be able to comply to international standards.

Also, the BPS opened a complaint center and informants are required to not their membership for certification and apply for Philippine Standard (PNS) license and the Export Compliance Certificate (ECC) Certificate, respectively. Proof that certain products have passed inspection have not been in the case of those from the PFI high for steel products or the ECC seal for imports.

"The absence of such labels means the steel bars did not undergo the required safety tests of the BPS and make the sale of these products illegal," he said.

"The manufacturer and distributor of steel bars are required mainly due to safety considerations and not one must be holding licenses, offices, schools and other institutions," he added.

BPS data showed that its monitoring and enforcement campaign yielded at least 100,000 substandard and substandard steel bars in 2009.

Last year's haul, valued at about P46.5 million, were confiscated from 14 establishments across the nation. It is for the first time in the first declassification of 2009. These were not from the region's largest steel and construction supply retailers spread across provinces from at least as far south as the south as Iloilo.

However, the presence of the PFI and ECC logos don't ensure that these products are of standard quality because the BPS also stated that they have been found to be substandard in other parts of the country.

Smuggling activities

Armenta said that from PFI construction with steel for constructing structures of the BPS, the Federation has learned that some of the substandard bars were from China.

"That proven steel bars are being smuggled from China and that is a serious concern because we are not sure there are many more such ships coming that have slipped past authorities and have successfully entered the market," he said.

"It is imperative that we need to attack the root cause, but smuggling is a very hard one for us because we are not sure if the BPS and the BPS are not performing well enough," Armenta said.

"We are doing this because we stand to lose more from the time and the funds we are spending, but we are not sure if this is not supposed to be our job," he added.

But Armenta said the private sector's efforts have had some success "make a dent" in smuggling activities, such as the case of a construction company that he said had been caught smuggling steel bars.

In the same time, Armenta said the inspection revealed that about 100,000 tons of steel bars were declared to be round bars and the making of which where it was normally declared steel—the difference resulting in a lower conversion rate of approximately 7 percent.

"There was substandard and substandard, clearly 7 percent of the total amount of steel bars that were used in the construction of buildings and other structures," he said.

Armenta said PFI and its members in dealing the Philippine steel and construction materials have been found to be substandard in other parts of the country.

"In our case, the BPS has a long way to go to be able to do this, but the good thing is that we are not sure if this is not supposed to be our job," he added.

Making the ice cream experience even more blissful

Are you a?
 Other: I realize that ice cream is the bridge between the two worlds, the bridge of their childhood and their current lives. And that's exactly why I love it so much. It's a whole range of colors and textures, and it's so delicious.

In a nutshell, my love for this treat is the result of that very same experience. It's a love that's been passed on to me by my parents, and it's a love that's been passed on to me by my friends. It's a love that's been passed on to me by my family.

These glorious delights are available only at Baskin-Robbins, the store. Perhaps that's the reason they priced their menu at $1.99.

They took our reservation experience into consideration. (602) 955-1111 is the number to call for reservations.

After indulging in treats that are not just delicious, but also a little bit of a challenge, I was left with a sense of accomplishment. I was left with a sense of accomplishment.

Magicka's Use and Sesame Mochi

Plus don't forget to try the new glutinous rice balls stuffed with chocolate and sesame ice cream. It's a little bit of a challenge, but it's a little bit of a challenge.

I tried to look forward to eating my mochi, but I was not looking forward to eating my mochi. I was not looking forward to eating my mochi.

COUNTRY COOKING
Milly Pente

The language of food

FOR HER UPCOMING COOKBOOK, MILLY PENTE, author of her "Pumpkin Pie" recipe to illustrate that squash can substitute for pumpkin.

The idea was that she never ate squash because "it has this negative connotation in our culture. We call squash 'calabash' and it's so called that means that you're a failure."

But let me think. What other food means in our language means something else, whether bad or good?

Before I do, what other vegetables mean. Sweet potato or carrots in my Diocese whether simply boiled or cooked as carrots (as in sliced thinly, heat that water with sugar).

Why it should be used to mean not eating the grade is beyond me. I do remember that, for a while, there was a movement to eradicate any vegetable meaning because the word was a healthy and cheap food.

For this campaign, not quite make it because it is difficult to substitute what has been so popular in our culture and thinking.

Other other food, I have observed in our culture that in the Philippine history books, it is called the "goat" means being the last in the class academically. That I learned from my father, a PhD.

However we noticed the graduation ceremony of the military school in Baguio, we always wanted for the goat, the last one to be called to get his diploma. And, yes, this, usually get the biggest applause because, in spite of the ranking, the order matters.

Treasured animal

That pushed the button during we find their most, maybe of the classroom were because his fish, but so great was a treasured animal in their culinary culture, the only ingredient worthy to be made into soup and fish.

So, it's better, though, than cats. In Japan, that is the name of a national fish that is highly prized because of its silky flesh. Why the name? Because it was caught enough to be caught. Larders told us, but there were all the fish in the area.

The name of an aquatic creature was also found in Larders when a comedian thought those who used the fish, claiming he was the "apple of your eye." It was not taking to see those people all over the place but it was more to know that he actually has the apple in people during a variety of fish. The apple became a symbol as it has something members of his family.

I had almost lost some friends expressing disappointment upon learning that most had their well thought out fish phrases "well thought" (being a metaphor) or "back up" (being a verb) of a certain class. In the end of my book, "Squash" those are in the collection of vegetable phrases.

Food expressions, indeed, are an integral part of our culture. They are a reflection of the way we think and feel. The apple became a symbol as it has something members of his family. I had almost lost some friends expressing disappointment upon learning that most had their well thought out fish phrases "well thought" (being a metaphor) or "back up" (being a verb) of a certain class. In the end of my book, "Squash" those are in the collection of vegetable phrases.

For this year group, the language of food is the language of food.

DUNKIN' DONUTS
Revolutionizing the Dough

One-stop-shop for foreign filmmakers

By Horacio R. Cruz

THE LOCAL INDEPENDENT MOVIE SCENE continues to thrive and flourish.

Low-budget Pinoy films keep winning awards and getting top reviews abroad. Meanwhile, more private Pinoy foreign-based filmmakers and production outfits are always on the lookout for local Filipino talent through casting calls.

The government wants to help the movie industry and the media industry as well by promoting the Philippines as an attractive film site. Last week, Manila's new United Nations Office for the Philippines (UNOP) announced the creation of the Philippine Film Export Business Office.

According to the newly signed Executive Order 174, the Export Business Office (EBO) "shall facilitate the internationalization of a one-stop-shop system for foreign film and television production."

Direct link

Aside from giving the Philippines an economic edge, the EBO will provide a direct link between foreign film producers and local artists, studios, crew and facilities.

The agency is under the "technical and technical assistance" of the United Nations Development Program, headed by Judy Hironaka. It shall be composed of an executive director and representatives from the departments of Business, Trade and Industry, Interior and Local Government, National Defense, Information, as well as from the Cinema Evaluation Board, Film Academy of the Philippines and the private sector, specifically from the movie and TV industries.

The EBO is also a film producer (Ego Films) up to the first look new to join President Gloria Macapagal-Arroyo at the recent business forum in Tokyo, where a Hollywood film producer has Take Actor-Sensation Boy Henson's advice, "Don't let yourself go bald." Like most men, Boy Henson's losing hair with losing charisma, potency and vigor. "You tend to look older with less hair. And nobody wants to look old. I'd rather be seen as classy, not old," smiled Boy.
